Long copy: Late-season whitetail hunters require layering systems that work a little harder, offering up more than warmth to outlast all-day sits through winter's worst weather. They need complementary layers that seal out wind, cold and moisture while simultaneously trapping their body's heat and warming them from the inside out. And, because long, cold sits quickly deplete their body warmth, they need gear ready and willing to do some of the work for them. Part of Muddy's all-new assortment of hunting apparel and accessories, every item with the Nucleus name delivers a long-lasting and adjustable heat source that sees passionate tree stand hunters through their longest, coldest days in the field.
